Unusually cold summer predicted in UK Published duration 5 November 2013 media caption The Met Office says this year's summer is on course to be the coldest of the past decade. A cool and sunny summer is likely in the UK this year, the Met Office has said. However, temperatures are expected to fall dramatically after the end of June and drought conditions are likely to be widespread. Met Office chief executive

Dr Julia Slingo says a new dry trend could hit the UK by June. It was last summer that the lowest June temperatures since records began were recorded. The warmest June temperature in England and Wales was 35.8C, recorded in Dorset in 2014, while the coldest June was 24.9C
