YouTube Blazzer v1.0.Q: Sql Server 2008 r2 multi-file lock escalation and problems I have a stored procedure which was written to work without any locks in SQL Server 2005. Since upgrading to 2008 I have been hit with strange locking issues. It is simply a multi-statement INSERT INTO SELECT FROM WITH (NOLOCK) statement which inserts values from a view into a table. On SQL Server 2005 this worked fine, but when I do it on SQL Server 2008 it fails with the error: [Microsoft][SQL Server Native Client 10.0][SQL Server]Operating system error number 4. [Microsoft][SQL Server Native Client 10.0][SQL Server]File number 1 for lock request(page (1:2)) has already been opened. It is now closed. [Microsoft][SQL Server Native Client 10.0][SQL Server]Lock type 0 requested (X,X) but actual acquired (U,U) [Microsoft][SQL Server Native Client 10.0][SQL Server]File number 1 for lock request(page (1:2)) is now being used for lock request (1:1), file number 1 If I understand it correctly then it means that the view definition's WITH (NOLOCK) statement causes the rowversion column (and therefore the clustered index on the table) to generate a new timestamp which the lock request tries to acquire. As you can see from the error it succeeds in acquiring an U lock (for use in versioning), but fails on X lock (for row versions). Can someone explain
